

EnviroNote 1127 - March 2023

Eurofins acquires AEML Laboratories

Eurofins is proud to announce today (March 3, 2023) the acquisition of the business and the assets of AEML Pty Ltd (“AEML”). Laboratories. AEML specialises in mould and spore trap analysis, as well as environmental and microbiological testing for private, industrial, and government projects and contracts in Australia and New Zealand for the past four years. This acquisition will expand Eurofins’ environmental testing capabilities and complement its existing mould laboratory in Newcastle, as well as its broader network of Eurofins Environment Testing Laboratories across Australia and New Zealand.

Shay Xie, General Manager of Eurofins Specialty Services Australia and New Zealand, expressed his pleasure in welcoming AEML to Eurofins. He is confident that Eurofins can build and extend capabilities while maintaining industry-leading turnaround time to clients. The addition of AEML and their staff to Eurofins’ current Melbourne laboratories will strengthen its analytical services across the Indoor Air Quality and Hygiene Testing Markets.

Directors of AEML, Ronald Mazur and Stephen Kontos say “We are pleased to announce the decision of AEML Laboratories to join the growing Eurofins network. Shifting from our sole expertise on fungal spore identification and quantification, across to Eurofins who are equally aligned with our core Microbiological Testing services but will provide exponential growth for us across all the sample type platforms. This includes new testing markets that we have never operated in, such as Food, Water, Cosmetics and other Environmental testing. We envision this development to provide our clients and staff with more opportunities in the testing industry, and ensure great potential gains moving forward.”

AEML, Pty Ltd. Laboratories will hereinafter be trading as “Eurofins | AEML” and will be relocated immediately from its current premises in Braeside, Victoria to our Eurofins Melbourne Campus located in Dandenong South. All enquiries can be made through our National network of Laboratories via the contact details below or directly to:
